

Call for Submissions: APA Division 34 Undergraduate Student Research Award

*New this year: we are delighted to announce the inaugural Saunders Conservation Psychology Scholar Award, which will support costs up to $2,000 for one scholar to participate in a conference in Conservation Psychology. The awardee will be chosen from the Div 34 winners, and students are eligible.

The American Psychological Association Division 34 Undergraduate Student Research Award recognizes outstanding original research conducted by an undergraduate student or team of undergraduate students on any topic in environmental, conservation, or population psychology and completed by 1 Jan of the year prior to the due date. The award consists of a certificate and a $150 prize. The award will be judged by a panel of Division members and awarded on the basis of both the quality of the research and the writing. The submission may be an original empirical investigation, a qualitative review paper, or a meta-analysis. Students need not be American nor current members of the Division.

Papers may be authored by one or more undergraduate students: team submissions are acceptable. If a team paper is selected to receive the award, the cash portion will be divided equally between the undergraduate authors. There may be co-authors who are not students, but lead authors must be undergraduate students.

Due Date: May 1

Application

1. A letter or email from the faculty supervisor confirming that the applicant(s) are undergraduate student(s) in psychology or a related field (or was when the work was done) and that one applicant merits first authorship. In the case of a team submission, the confirmation should specify that lead authors are undergraduates, the work was a joint effort among the authors, and that most of the work is by the undergraduate student authors.
2. A full paper in APA (6th ed.) format reporting the project. This should be a complete report as would be written for a journal submission. Please send a blinded manuscript as PDF (no authors nor institutions) and a separate title page.

Send your submissions or questions to the Chair of the Awards Committee, Cameron Brick
