

Dickinson College ROTC House

Charter

Philosophy: Reserve Officer's Training Corps (R.O.T.C.) maintains the philosophy to be a beacon of Leadership and Excellence for the Dickinson College community. We wish to promote the ROTC program and generate a strong positive image of it on campus. We strive to improve the leadership, confidence, and physical fitness of all the members of our house. The members of the house are to set the standards for the ROTC program and to inspire others in the program to achieve their utmost best. We aim to create a community within the house that promotes camaraderie and creates a brotherhood in which all members of the house and battalion are accepted and supported. It is intended that the household environment enhances the members' critical skills and academic capacities. We strive to make sure every member of the house is respected, supported and represented. Members of the house are expected to uphold all community standards set forth by Dickinson College in and out of uniform. Housemates' willingness to succeed will be evaluated regularly in order to ensure that the house is exceeding all expectations set forth by the Cadre.

Values: Leadership, Loyalty, Duty, Respect, Selfless Service, Honor, Integrity, and Personal Courage.

Purpose: To train and commission the future leaders of America's sons and daughters in the United States Army.
