

The Social Justice House 2019 - 2020 Academic Year Plan:

House Mission:

The Social Justice House is a space on the Dickinson College campus where students with social justice passions bring their academic work, personal experiences, and ideas to a community that supports and reflects social activism. This is a place where students can feel safe and are able to talk about issues that are bothering them either on or outside of Dickinson's campus. Throughout the year, students will attend meetings that will be based off of anything that someone or a group of people feel like the rest of the house and Dickinson community needs to hear about. We will collaborate with other special interest houses that share common goals with us. Overall, the Social Justice House is a family and accepts all who share the same interest of fighting for social justice.

Our Goals:

- Help students to engage with the personal, the political, and the intellectual
- Build an engaged, diverse, and motivated community
- Create a space that bonds people of all color

How we chose students:

When we choose students to live in our home, we gauge our choices by how well students connect with current residents when they come to our weekly house meetings at the end of the semester (the semester before they move into the house). We have a waiting list that we pull from if and when students choose to no longer live in the house.

We are such an open community that we also keep our eyes and ears attuned within the community, scouting out potential residents if and when need be.
