

Dealing with a Diagnosis

"I was recently diagnosed with a heart disease-related condition. Before I go ahead with the treatment recommended, I want to talk to another doctor. Can you help?"

Yes. It is especially important to get a second opinion when facing a serious illness, surgery or complex interventions to help you make the best decisions. Another doctor may suggest a less invasive procedure, for example. A Personal Health Advocate can help you by researching the latest treatment options, locating doctors who specialize in the condition, scheduling the consultation, transferring medical records, and more. If needed, we can help you secure a third opinion.
