A screenshot of a form with two red text boxes. The first red box says "Please indicate whether you understand the steps involved in the academic accommodations process." Below it is a checkbox labeled "I understand" with a yellow arrow pointing to it. The second red box says "Please indicate your awareness that Dickinson requires all students to demonstrate proficiency through the intermediate level of a language other than English." Below it is a checked checkbox labeled "I understand" with a yellow arrow pointing to it. There is also a text input field between the two red boxes.

A. Just above the “Validate and Submit Form” button, you’ll see an error message like this one:

- You must indicate the status and / or type of the documentational support of your medical condition.

This means that you didn’t complete a field that you needed to. Please go back and find what had been left blank, fill it in, and then click “Submit Form” again.

B. You’ll get the following message (and if you do, you’re done!)
